than 72 bird species have been spotted — the highest count so far at any site in Delhi since the last birding season. According to ecologists from Bombay Natural History Society (BNHS), who assessed the species density on Thursday, the species include migratory waterfowls, grass-birds, songbirds and native. "We recorded 72 species at the site during our bird walk. These included birds the wetland and grass and as well as wooded areas. There were coots, shovellers, redshanks, greenshanks and others. This is a very good outcome for Delhi," said Sohail Madan, assistant director, BNHS. According to another census held in January at various birding hotspots of Delhi, only 27 species of birds were spotted on the stretch along the Yamuna
