School of Letters (SOL)

The SOL is home to postgraduate studies and doctoral research in Comparative Literature and Translation Studies (CLTS), English, English Language Education and Hindi. It offers a range of interdisciplinary, diverse, and interconnected programmes in the literary humanities that support, encourage and redefine the meanings of literature, culture, language and humanisms in both historical and contemporary perspectives.

PhD in CLTS

The PhD programme in Comparative Literature and Translation Studies (CLTS) stands for literary comparison as a conceptual space in which the imagination can be confronted with otherness. The aim is to turn literary research into an experience which both questions and redraws the sense of culture, identity and the world. While a comparatist or translator must have close-reading skills in the original language, researchers may also choose to bring literary studies in dialogue with other disciplines from the humanities. The programme encourages the practice of translation and recognizes that it promotes the reading and dissemination of literatures in as many languages as possible, with a focus on Indian and literary languages from southern Asia. Currently supervision in the following research domains is available:
