

"No you are not trying to understand anything. Because labels are the opposite of understanding...Who am I?

Do you mean where I'm from?

What I one day might become?

What I do? What I've done?

What I dream?

Do you mean ... what you see or what I've seen?

What I fear or what I dream?

Do you mean who I love? Do you mean who I've lost?

Who am I?

I guess who I am is exactly the same as who you are. Not better than, not less than. Because there is no one who has been or will ever be exactly the same as either you or me."

INTRODUCTION

Disability has always been seen as a sorry state, and to some extent it might be even true. However, equally true is the fact that disability inspires unmatched strength, spirit, and resilience. There are numerous examples of such inspiring stories; some told and others untold. It's time to break the expression of remorse, and break into a smile of hope in celebration of life beyond disability.

Why should disability be a given, a story of an individual, and as a society we just look on helplessly? Why can't we together annihilate the constrained notion of disability, and take the responsibility of being the agent of change. Let's come together on this mental health day to 'own', 'learn' and 'celebrate' the lived experiences of disability!
